ParkinSpot

July Adventures

Snow, mud, ice, friends, adventure, family and more. July's adventures have been an exciting season for the ParkinSpot. We left Te Anau and set off with our friends, the Goughs, who flew down from Katikati to do some exploring with us. We headed into the MACKENZIE BASIN and conquered our first alpine pass, the Linds!!! Don don don!!! The ute and caravan went wonderfully well.

Before we headed over the Linds we explored Cromwell's old district and had to get an iconic photo with the giant fruit.

On the other side of the winter wonderland Linds Pass was our next extraordinary site, The Omarama Clay Cliffs. This impressive geological site has massive towering cliffs of clay, you can see all the different veins of clay and sediment and we decided to go exploring inside, climbing and sliding over the clay slopes. This is platypus on the frozen clay.

We headed up Mt Cook but it was raining so we didn't get any nice mountain views. Next up we headed to Tekapo to chase some snow that had fallen the week earlier. We visited the beautiful Church of the Good Shepherd, it was so pretty with the snowy mountains in the background, the warm sun and the perfectly blue sky. We then went to Tekapo springs for some action and relaxation. First up was ice skating, it was epic ice skating outside with snow all around, then we went tubing down the snow and finished up with a hot swim.

After Tekapo we made our way to Christchurch, celebrated Zozo's 10th birthday and went to Orana Wildlife park. Zoe got a slingshot, a hexi stove, a flint and steel and of course a new knife for her birthday. Following our visit to Orana, Dad discovered his new favourite animal is an Emu, they were so hilarious running around and skipping, jumping and frolicking.

After we said goodbye to our friends we made our way north up to Anakiwa for a Parkin Family gathering. Our cousins had flown in from Luxembourg and Tauranga and we had a fun week of cousin time, sailing, trying to catch baby eels, and rowing the dingy about the Queen Charlotte sounds.

For her birthday dinner celebration Zoe requested Escargot "snails" for dinner, she LOVED them! I wouldn't say I'd have them every night, but they were ok....

Ministry Update

July has been a busy month of travel and family time but alongside this we have been chatting with pastors and church leaders about the upcoming national marriage week. This September 13th to 19th multiple different organisations across NZ are coming together with a united vision to provide easy access to a banquet of resources with one common goal 'support and grow healthy marriages'.

Great marriages are not found; they are built with intention, weathered with grace, and cherished as a living legacy. National Marriage Week New Zealand exists to honour this enduring journey. It's an annual invitation to couples across the nation to pause, reflect, and invest in the strength of their union. If you haven't had a look at the survey mentioned last month, check it out here <https://www.marriageweek.org.nz/#survey>
